

In tax law, the word retrospective is highly contentious and sometimes even uneasy. In this context, it carries a softer meaning that speaks of reflection and gratitude rather than contention. This is a retrospective of legacy, a quiet journey through the thoughts and voices of those who once guided the GST Review. Across the last twenty-five years, every Editor has left behind a trace of their time through their words, their concerns, their hopes and their vision for the profession and for the Association. In this commemorative collection, we have brought together those messages that each Editor believed best represented their tenure and the spirit of their period. They stand as more than recollections and serve as markers of the Association's growth and the continuity of its intellectual tradition. When the Golden Jubilee Edition carried the first fifty years of editorials, it captured the formative half of our journey. This collection carries the story forwa.....
